

AN OVERVIEW OF OUR EDUCATIONAL INTERVENTION PROJECT IN ILORA COMMUNITY:

Free Summer School Project (2019 Till Date)

Empowering Futures

(One Child & a Community At A Time)

Dear friends of Africa-RII,

When I set out to prepare a summary report of our activities through Africa-RII since 2019, I did not envisage the extent of emotions and reflection it would elicit. As we all know, Africa-RII in 2019 against the backdrop of our community work since 2012 Train A Child TODAY (TACT). Now, with the benefit of deeper hindsight, the vision that birthed project-TACT was in itself personal to me in ways. It was, perhaps, my first attempt to revisit a childhood I consider a bit unsavoury. A childhood where the innocence of a child falls quite early – marked by manifestation of poverty and its bearing on everyday life, dysfunctional family and social systems and what I often refer to as the world of adults that are somewhat flawed and often insensitive to children's world. Although personal, these angles, with their specific reference stories, characterise the moments culminating in my trajectory into community work. Children take centre stage in the vision, but they are not in isolation from their mothers and other family and social structures. Neither are they insulated from gender politics and classism. So since 2012, the vision for Project TACT has had an implicit form of protest, expression, healing and self-discovery at its core.

One of the central ideas that often characterises my understanding of the vision that guides the formation of project-TACT and perhaps still running through our most recent projects is that poverty, at its core, affects the overall individual's self-dignity. By this, I found education to be one of the essential ingredients to the restoration of what might have been broken, especially in a child whose life trajectory is often than not shaped by accident of birth. One of the lessons of project-TACT when redesigning the free summer school project, which was initially named Project-TACT 2.0, is that poverty, like most social problems, is multidimensional. Therefore, intervention is often an opportunity to work at the intersections of other related social problems. It is, therefore, plausible to see how a local educational project is tackling illiteracy, empowering women, practising sustainability, promoting girls-child advocacy, skills, jobs, and improving the local economy. We have tried to entrench a culture of frugality, discipline, transparency and self-accountability. The journey has also been testimony of an organic range of network of solidarity and stakeholders across divides.

I consider it a privilege to drive the vision of the founder of Africa-RII and capture the milestones we have accomplished, particularly in the last 5 years. I have been blessed by the gifts of friendships and a support system that held the vision down in the past years. As always, I believe we are heading towards a new phase where we shall consolidate on past gains, incorporate new visions and critically work on the sustainability of our projects with greater vigour and impact. Thus, the circumstance that birthed this moment of deeper reflection this document stands for is also once again connected to the events in my private life on at least two levels. First is the successful completion of my PhD degree in November 2023, signalling a new transition phase in my career – currently precarious and yet with high hopes of career stability. Also, in the past Nineteen months, my beloved sister (Olawumi Rhoda Ajayi) has had a serious struggle. Like my beloved mother, she has been a source of stability, loyalty and support for me and my family. Indeed, it is her wish that the impact of Africa-RII continues. Thus, the 2024 year off is indeed a year of re-evaluation and repositioning for a greater and more sustainable future for Africa-RII.

As part of our repositioning strategies, a new board of Africa-RII has been incorporated with the Corporate Affairs Commission Nigeria. As friends and partners, we are counting on your continuous support as we move forward.

Our Objective

While the primary focus is in the area of education, each intervention is envisioned to embody multiple strands of solutions and social impacts. These are summarised in the following set of objectives:

- To make up for the falling standards of public education in Nigeria through the introduction of free extra-moral classes for students in Senior Secondary Schools - in the form of summer schools, weekend lessons mid-term break support programmes and library services.
- Prepare young secondary school leavers for career paths through direct mentorship programmes and life coaching.
- To prepare and improve the chances of public students at their Senior Secondary School Examinations and other related Examination
- We envisage a ripple economic effect in the host community through strategic economic decision that prioritizes local vendors, farmers, women and artisans in the host community.
- Promotion of literacy, reskilling to non-literate youths.
- promotion of the principle of an altruistic life outlook for the Youths within reach of the network. To ensure the promotion of individual responsibility vis-a-vis the community in the collective for sustainability and a prosperous collective future.
- To become a model for bottom-up solutions to social problems through a broad range of collaboration with identifiable stakeholders and partners in the host communities and beyond.

To further achieve our stated objectives, we are increasing the support provided to students in the community through the following initiatives:

- Creating a workgroup for monitoring, support, interventions, and mentoring an emerging generation of our educational support projects over the years, gaining admission into higher education, seeking admissions, and embracing the next steps of development. Status: Ongoing

• We are setting up a broad-based scholarship scheme (The Àjùmòbí Scholarship) to support students at different phases of their studies. Status: It will take off in 2025 (for more information, visit:).

• Additionally, we intend to equip the community centre towards digitalisation and space to improve computer literacy and technology knowledge in the community.

• A solar panel project for the centre. This aligns with our goal and culture of sustainability and provides an affordable energy supply to the resource center.

• Provision of learning aid materials (such as Projectors) and installation of internet services.

• Youth-friendly sports/ games materials (chess, table tennis, pool game board, soccer table game)

• Remodelling the centre's old roof to a modern and sustainable one (renovation work).

• Perimeter fencing of the front area of the property for effective space usage and protection from random animal/people invaders, plus further security measures.

• Set up a multi-purpose- convertible space for training & skill acquisition spaces targetted at teenagers and youths in need of such skills.

• Facilitate the training of languages (German & French).

• Additional curriculum design and mentorship programmes on leadership, sustainability, entrepreneurship, communication, health & lifestyles.

• More Book acquisition for the library.

• Resumption of free summer school project, 2025

Partners & Partnerships

This report is a testament to the importance of strong partnerships and your support. Our community projects have benefitted from the generosity and sacrifices of individuals at different phases of our interventions. We are grateful to you; we remain committed to the culture of accountability, transparency and prudent management of our resources while exploring sustainable avenues.

As we step into the new year, we have received pledges of support from various organisations and actively seek to work with others that align with our values and objectives.

We welcome more support, collaborations, or partnerships that will translate into a productive outcome for our projects.
